

LANXESS signs “sustainable” revolving credit facility of EUR 1 billion

- Interest rate terms linked to fulfillment of ESG criteria
- Reduction of greenhouse gases and increase in the proportion of women in management as parameters
- Further establishment of climate targets in the company
- Consortium of 12 banks

Cologne – LANXESS takes an innovative approach to Group financing and has linked its main revolving credit facility to the fulfillment of ESG (Environment, Social and Governance) criteria. The specialty chemicals company has now agreed a new syndicated credit facility with 12 banks, whose interest conditions depend, among other things, on the successful reduction of its greenhouse gas emissions (Scope 1) and the increase in the proportion of women on the top three management levels.

With a volume of EUR 1 billion, it replaces the syndicated loan of EUR 1.25 billion expiring in May 2023. The “sustainable” revolving credit facility has an initial term of five years as well as two options for one-year extensions.

“We are convinced that sustainable criteria are also becoming increasingly important for the capital markets. We have therefore developed this innovative financing concept together with our banking partners. With the 'sustainable' revolving credit facility, we are also underlining our commitment to achieving our ambitious climate targets,” said Michael Pontzen, LANXESS’ Chief Financial Officer.

In November, LANXESS announced that it will go climate neutral and eliminate its greenhouse gas emissions of currently around 3.2 million metric tons of CO<sub>2</sub> by 2040.

The revolving credit facility is intended to secure the company’s liquidity in the long term and thus to provide financial backup for
